In butchers' "league" stand clear, the weather now is cold, MrC croll's in amourst you, to keep up days of old; To very you from extorting, in making people pay. The prices you fire marging so shamefully to-day; And, as to threat of all you'll do, for these he does not enre, Rend down below, and there you'll see the prices he has those; If he can sell so cheaply, why don't you do the same. If he can sell so cheaply, why don't you do the same. If he market is before you, then, why MrCarroll blame; And when the people come and see such meat before their cyes, and when the people come and see such meat before their cyes, In such predigious quantity the shambles bearing down, Enough to feed our soldiery, and every house is town; and as the winter gets more rold with bitting frost and snow, There stands MrCarroll's well-filled shop for every one to go. Nor need they fear, the will state them They all must know years long ago, he always used to do; And here's another winter come, and no one need despair, With well-filled shop by day and night, MrCarroll's always there.

MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL.—From the Home for Sichi Children, Redear, Thomas W. S. Locke, E.eq., Admirally Surgeon, writer,—"I can bear testimony to the purity of Müller's Oil, which I have now used for some three years. In comparing the oil supplied by Mr. Müller with that used previously, I cannot but be struck with the few cases in which the stomach refuses to tolerate the oil, a great desideratum in entituition where so many cases of secrofula are admirted. I can confidently recommend Mr. Müller's Oil as of exceptional purity and of great dietetic value."

"MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL is, in my opinion, unquestionably the best—immensurably superior to the brown oil—more palatable and far more efficacious."—"W. Domett Stone, Eq., M.D., Physician to the Finsbury and to the Western and General Dispensaries, &c., &c.

STAR OF PEACE G. M. Co. (Limited.)—Hill End, 19th April. The mining manager reports:—"720-feet level: After fitting our new spar wheels on the winding engine, it took us a fortnight to get the water down in the shaft. Since last Monday we have been underhand stoping 70 feet south from the shaft. Broke down about 6 tons of the foot-wall vein; this is now 16 inches thick, and contains a deal of mineral and showing a few specks of gold. Will not break any hanging-wall vein down till end of next week. Crushed up from here this week 45 tons, yielding 23 oz. 17 dwts, 16 grs. retorted gold. This is the hanging-wall vein and foot-wall vein mixed. The preceding crushing from here of mixed quartz was 70 tons, yielding 15 oz. 12 dwts. 12 grs. This is a very decided improvement. Crown Prince United. Matthewson's shaft, 140-feet level, Star of Peece vin: This dive is now in 50 feet, 20 feet being on the run of rock containing the pyrites. As we went north the run kept dipping, and I have now commenced sinking 15 feet back from the face, and as far as we have gone down, the pyrites appear to be richer in the rock and continue about 2 feet wide. 27 tons of this rock at grass."

SUMMARY OF NEWS FOR EUROPE The summary of Colonial news for transmission to Europe via San Francisco by the Royal mail steamship City of New York, will be published in this journal on Thursday, 24th instant. Orders for extra copies should be ledged with the clerk of the counter on Wednesday. Our friends in the country are reminded that orders to post for England will be too late after Thursday morning's mail.

The Sydney Morning Merald.

TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 187%

There is none too much money in the colony, and there is no need for wasting any of it. A law that should compel waste would be worse than useless, it would be mischievous If therefore it can be clearly shown that or one single 640-acre block an expenditure of more than ten shillings an acre is not required in improvements for a period of five rears, it is folly to insist on more being spent. This has not yet been shown satisfactorily, though it has often been asserted; but the figures that Mr. COPELAND adduced would tend to show that twenty shillings is not an excessive amount for five years' occupancy. It probably would be if several square miles postpone improvements. All Hoskins Fidition and apparently still to learn that ridicule is not argument. But the objection is a solid one, and must be fairly faced. The Legislature has done too much already to promote dummyism, and should be careful how it suffers any Minister to tempt it to do more. That our readers may understand all the inland towns, remain unprovided for; while the danger of pollution to this watershed, surrounded as it is by a dense to do more. That our readers may understand all the inland towns, remain unprovided for; while the danger of pollution to this watershed, replenished with bountiful rains, has been equal to the demands of the france. But it is by a dense and the inland towns, remain unprovided for; while the danger of pollution to this watershed, replenished with bountiful rains, has been equal to the demands of the first chief laudation in the world he knew rate in boyhood has been spoken, not in the English, but in a foreign tongue. The correspondent of the Careful how it suffers any Minister to tempt for; while the danger of pollution to this surprise was expressed at the inaction of the city so far as quantity is concerned. But in boyhood has been spoken, not in the English but in a foreign tongue. The correspondent of the first careful how it suffers any Minister to tempt in boyhood has been spoken, not in the English in boyhood has been spoken, not in the English in boyhood has been spoken, not in the English in boyhood has been spoken, not in the English in boyhood has been stand fully how the matter stands, we reprint the third clause of the bill :-

" Any conditional purchaser who may have resided upon his conditional purchase for three years, and made due declaration of such residence, and paid the balance of his purchase money, or interest or instal-ment thereof, as by the said Acts required, may make pplication to the Minister for an extension of the time application to the minister for an excession of the time for completion of his improvements to a further term not exceeding two years, and if the Minister shall be satisfied that the several other conditions of such purchase have been duly performed, he may grant such extension; and on completion of the improvements within such extended term, the conditional purchaser shall become entitled to a grant as provided by the said Acts. Provided that during such extended term, the conditional purchase shall continue to be the resi-dence (bone-fide) of the conditional purchaser, and shall a liable to forfeiture for non-residence as during the riginal term of three years."

It is obvious that in this clause there is no provision whatever for any bona-fide improvements during the first three years, eyond the construction of a hut for residence. A certain concession is offered to those who, not having made the improve-ments, have fulfilled the "other conditions." What those other conditions are is clearly indicated by their recital; the selector must have resided for three years, must have made due declaration of such residence, and must have paid the balance of his purchase money or these three things he may get an extension of two years to complete the other improve-ments, of which the building of the hut may stand as the commencement. Under this

If there are any special reasons for further procrastination they must be such as can be clearly stated ad defended; but unexplained and unjustified delay will certainly bring censure upon The sewerage question is, if possible, more urgent than that of water supply, at least for the city of Sydney. Upon an area of about tive square miles there is concentrated a popu-lation of a hundred thousand. That means that there are twenty thousand family residences, with a host of business premises, to be relieved of their excrementations matter and other refuse by drainage, or by some other means. It happens that only a portion of these premises have any drainage at all, and in one respect that is a subject for congratulation, for they are pouring the whole of their accumulated filth into the harbour. The effect is visible to the most casual observer, in interest or instalment thereof. The Saturday Review in a recent article collate The Saturday Review in a recent article collate the bankruptcy statistics of the past few years, with the view of obtaining from them any light which they are calculated to throw on the sauredly very important question, whether or not the commercial depression in England has reached its turning-point. For hast year, it takes those collected by Mr. RICHARD SEVD, and for previous years it relies on a circular issued last April by Messrs. JOHN KEMP and Co. It finds that in 1884 the total number of failures in England and Wales was 15,850, and that in 1869 they rose to 16,618. In the following year they dropped to less than Messrs. John Krip and Co. It times the total number of failures in England and Wais was 15,850, and that in 1869 they rose to 16,518. In the following year they dropped to less than half as many, or 8151, and they remained at very nearly that figure during the two following years. In 1873 they began to increase; and, for three years remaining a little above 9000, they in 1876 jumped up to 10,848, in 1877 to 11,247, and has year they reached 15,059. The number of failures in 1878, thus it will be seen, has not reached the point at which it stood both in 1868 and 1869. The Overend Gunst failure took place in 1800, and the increase of bankruptcies consequent upon it did not reach it maximum till three years after it. The alterstion of the Bankruptcy Law, however, at the close of 1869, caused a rush of insolvents to get through the Court during that year under the provisions of the old Act. The year 1868, therefore, two years after the Overend Gunxer failure, it is considered, may fairly be set down as the year during which the true maximum number of bankruptcies took place. Parity of reasoning would lead us to infer that the full effects of the Glasgow Bank crisis have not ye been realized, and that 1879 may show an increase of failures on 1378. It is satisfactory, however, to reflect that during the last decade, the year maximum bankruptcies, when it did come, was also the turning point of English trade; afts which set in the period of prosperity, advancing as Mr. Gladstons described it, "by leaps as bounds," and that whether it comes again this year or whether it must be waited for till mext, then

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETYS

South Wales commenced yesterday at the Prince Alfred Park, and will be continued every day during the present week. For many years past this exhibition has been looked forward to as one of the chief events of the year, but on the present occasion the forthcoming International Exhibition of 1879 has to a very large extent overshadowed the ordinary colonial exhibition, and has absted the interest that would otherwise have been felt in it. Our readers will, no doubt, remember that when the idea was first started of having a grand International Exhibition in Sydney, it was contemplated to merge the annual exhibition of our Agricultural Society into the larger event; but as the affair begen to assume shape it was found that a National Exhibition would be beyond the scope of the Agricultural Society, and that body wisely declined the management of it. At the same time it was felt that, in the interests of the steek owners of the colony, to whose energy and perseverance the annual shows had been so largely owing, an opportunity should be afforded them of exhibiting the results of their skill, science, and enterprise, and therefore it was received that without regard to the more important event of September next, the annual April show of the society should he held. It was never intended that this exhibition should in any way rival the grand event of September; and if was never expected that under the circumstances it would be a very successful affair. All this being remembered, it only remains to say that the Agricultural Society of New South Wales have not been danned by the difficulties that lay in their road, and have produced what is, after all, a very interesting show.

It was not intended, nor was it expected, that the afternations of persons on the proved by experience that a large number of persons on the The annual exhibition of the Agricultural Society of New

Frequently the bellows is not used, and another and more objectionable unethod of blowing the veal is adopted. This is no other than for the batcher to apply his mouth to an opening under the skin in one of the parts of the calf mentioned, and then to blow his breath into the meat until he has distended the calf to the required size. Then the carcase is hung up for view and for sale, and its appearance is further improved by a handful or two of four being thrown over it. One of the regulations for the working of the Abattoirs at Glebe Island says that

One of the regulations for the working of the Abattoirs at Globe Island says that "no meat shall be blown at the Abattoirs, and should may be found blown, the owner of the same, or person blowing the meat, will be held liable." But the blowing process is not done at the Abattoirs, it is done behind the butchors' shops, and nearly all butchors do it. There is a law, it is said, under which a butcher may be punished for blowing meat or for spouting lamb, but the difficulty is to catch them at it. One butcher, a few days ago, when asked whether any calves were blown on his premises, made answer, "I didn't know that blowing veal was ever done in Sydney. Sir," and yet, when the question was put to him, he was standing not far from a calf puffed like a bladder, only that but a short time before he must have hung upon the hooks, and must have helped to kill and prison or pu ont that but a short time before he must have hung upon the hooks, and must have helped to kill and dress on the premises, for the skin of the calf was found quite fresh in a corner, traces of blood partly washed awny and covered with sand or swedust were seen in the yard under a block and tackle, where the minual had evidently very recently been slaughtered and dressed; the strap and rope which had secured the calf before it was slaughtered which had secured the cair Sector it was isaughtered was found attached to the fence, and its paunch was discovered scaking in a tub of water. This slaughtering on the premises is, from all appearances, common to almost every butcher. Caives and sheep can frequently be found stowed away in an outhouse, and there are generally skins and tackling to be seen. The practice is necessary in the playing of yeal, and to some extent is necessary in the blowing of veal, and to some extent in the spouting and dressing of lamb. he spotting and dressing of lamb. The veal must be hown before the animal, after death, gets cold, and this could not well be done with the veal which comes from the Abattoirs. A more objectionable practice than the blowing of veal—and one said to be usual among the butchers—is that of spouting lamb. Here again the butcher's mouth is the chief instrument used, and the process consists in the man filling his mouth with warm melted fat and then ejecting it upon the meat. This gives the lamb that white and floury appearance which looks so well, and tempts so many buyers. Neither this nor any other of the objectionable practices in the butchering trade, alluded to in these stilles in the butchering trade, alluded to in these stilles, are new. They have existed a long long time, and have frequently come before the police courts in one shape or another, as newspaper reports will show. Their disgusting nature is now seem in a clearer light merely because their injurious effects upon meat conviction in a summors court describes them. All the suchering establishments are not bad, but most of thom seedjectionable in one way or other, and many of them and their portrait in what these articles have desirbed. The purtid fry which cost the butcher as fas of six guineas, was not the only one seen during a fait to some of the shops. In an establishment next foor to the one where the butcher professed such in secence of veal-blowing no fewer than three or four sheeps placks, green, and putrid-looking, were discovered with one good fry in a tub of water under a tap, and there could be no douts that keep were intended for sale as food, for the butcher, when questioned as to what he was againg to do with them, said "Oh! they're for sale it we can get anybody to buy them;" and it was only sheat their manifesses for food was pointed out pretty when the could prove the ground of the foot of the body is no constituted in the same time to the provention of the foot of the foot, the work of the foot of the body is no constant motion. Extract from letter of Private Ward, of the Frontier Mounted Police, Oga Colony, August, 1878;—"I thould just like you to see the real farm-house bread that I baze! The oven is one dug in the ground, and is just large enough to hold our daily quantum of two leaves. We use flour, water, sait, and Borwield's Baking Fowder. My bread often surprises me, it is of light, and white as snow. Some of our near will insist that I have been in the trade, and nothing I can say will convines them to the contrary!"
